To the Department of Justice:

The provisions of the Microsoft settlement agreement are tough, reasonable, fair to all parties involved, and go beyond the findings of Court of Appeals ruling. You are doing a disservice to computer customers and, given Microsoft's world leading position for this product, to the nation. You are hampering trade by your excessive involvement of government.

By pursuing a reckless agenda of attacking Microsoft you are neither representing justice, nor my interests as a computer user and an American.
